EXPERT BIOGRAPHIES: ALPHABETICAL LISTING

Glenn Baker

Co-Director, Azimuth Media; Director, US-Cuba Cooperative Security Project

Areas of Expertise: U.S.-Cuba relations

Phone: 202.797.5265 | Email: Glenn@azimuthmedia.org

Glenn Baker is a writer-producer with more than 40 documentaries broadcast on PBS exploring global security issues. His productions on nuclear weapons, Cuba, the military and the media, weapons marketing, conflict prevention, and firearms violence have been recognized with more than a dozen national awards. He was executive producer for Azimuth Media for the Frontline program "Missile Wars," and wrote and produced "Arming the Heavens," a documentary on the weaponization of space. His latest project is "Stand Up: Muslim-American Comics Come of Age," a documentary in the Corporation for Public Broadcasting's America at a Crossroads Initiative. He is currently senior producer for "Foreign Exchange with Fareed Zakaria," a weekly international affairs program on PBS co-produced with Oregon Public Broadcasting. Previously he was an analyst at the National Security Archive evaluating declassified government documents. He became co-director of Azimuth Media in 2001.

Baker created the U.S.-Cuba Cooperative Security Project in 1999, aimed at developing and expanding U.S.-Cuban dialogue on military and regional security issues. This dialogue is intended to help chart the course for normalizing political relations, and to facilitate peaceful U.S.-Cuba relations both today and in the future.

Dr. Bruce G. Blair

President, World Security Institute

Areas of Expertise: Nuclear command and control; de-alerting nuclear weapons; U.S.-Russia relations

Phone: 202.797.5116 | Email: Bblair@worldsecurityinstitute.org

Bruce G. Blair is the president of the World Security Institute, whose divisions include the Center for Defense Information, Azimuth Media, International Media, the Pulitzer Center on Crisis Reporting, and International Programs, with offices in Brussels and Moscow, and programs in Beijing and Shanghai. Early in his career he was a project director at the Congressional Office of Technology Assessment. From 1987-2000, he was a senior fellow in the Foreign Policy Studies Program at the Brookings Institution.

He received his B.S. in communications from the University of Illinois in 1970. He then entered the U.S. Air Force for four years, serving as a Minuteman ICBM launch control officer and support officer for the Strategic Air Command's Airborne Command Post (1970-1974). He earned a Ph.D. in operations research at Yale University in 1984, where he was also awarded a Russian language institute fellowship.

Blair is an expert on the security policies of the United States and Russia, specializing in nuclear forces and command-control systems.

He has frequently testified before Congress and has taught security studies as a visiting professor at Yale and Princeton universities. He was awarded a MacArthur Fellowship Prize in 1999 for his work and leadership on de-alerting nuclear forces.

Blair is the author of numerous books and articles on security issues in such publications as Scientific American, National Interest, The New York Times, and The Washington Post. His books include Strategic Command and Control (Brookings, 1984), winner of the Edgar S. Furniss Award for its contribution to the study of national security; Crisis Stability and Nuclear War (Oxford, 1988; co-editor); The Logic of Accidental Nuclear War (Brookings, 1993); and Global Zero Alert for Nuclear Forces (Brookings, 1995). He is currently finishing a new book on U.S. nuclear policy.

Mark Burgess Director, WSI Brussels

Areas of Expertise: terrorist organizations and tactics; European defense and security policies

Phone: +32 0 2 235 2418 | Email: Mburgess@wsibrussels.org

Mark Burgess is the director of the World Security Institute's Brussels office. Before heading the Brussels office, he directed the terrorism project at the Washington, D.C., office of the Center for Defense Information.

Burgess received his M.A. in war studies from King's College, London and also holds a joint B.A. in war studies and media and communication studies. Currently, he is completing a Ph.D. in politics.

While his main research area is the study of terrorism, Burgess has also written and spoken extensively on a variety of other security issues, including peacekeeping and the war in Iraq, and has been published and quoted in a wide range of U.S. and international outlets. His latest publications are the entries on "Peacekeeping," "The War on Terrorism," and "Homeland Security" in the newly released Encyclopedia of War and American Society (Sage Publications, 2006).

Lily Yali Chen Co-Director, International Media Division & Editor in Chief, Washington Observer

Areas of Expertise: Chinese media; Sino-U.S. relations

Phone: 202.797.5275 | Email: Lchen@washingtonobserver.org

Lily Yali Chen is the editor in chief of Washington Observer and periodically leads the International Media Division at the World Security Institute. Before joining Washington Observer, Chen worked for the English-language newspaper, China Daily, as a reporter and opinion writer on politics and international affairs from 1994 to 2000. She was awarded first and third prizes for the International News Award in 1998 and 1995 in China. Chen studied at the Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs at Princeton University and received her master's degree in international relations in June 2002. She received her bachelor's degree in international relations from the People's University of China in 1994.

Hon. Philip E. Coyle, III
Senior Advisor, Center for Defense Information

Areas of Expertise: Nuclear weapons testing and capabilities; U.S. missile defenses; base-realignment and closures (BRAC); space weaponization; hi-tech weaponry; defense acquisitions

Phone: 916.393.2951 | Email: Pcoyle@cdi.org

Philip Coyle is a senior advisor to the Center for Defense Information. He is a recognized expert on U.S. and worldwide military research, development and testing, on operational military matters, and on national security policy and defense spending, including defense acquisition reform and defense procurement. Coyle also has extensive background in missile defense, in military space systems, and in high-technology weapons, such as high power lasers and other directed-energy weapons. From his many years at Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory, Coyle also has considerable experience in nuclear weapons research, development, and testing, and nuclear weapons effects, including EMP.

From Sept. 29, 1994, through Jan. 20, 2001, Coyle was assistant secretary of defense and director, Operational Test and Evaluation, in the Department of Defense, and is the longest serving director in the 20-year history of the office. In this capacity, he was the principal advisor to the secretary of defense on test and evaluation at DOD.

At DOD, Coyle's responsibilities included stewardship of the Defense Department's Major Range and Test Facility Bases, including the large test ranges and test centers which DOD operates from Maryland and Florida to California and Hawaii.

Coyle was appointed by President George W. Bush to serve on the 2005 Defense Base Realignment and Closure Commission, and was nominated for this position by House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi.

During the 1995 Base Realignment and Closure (BRAC), Coyle served as the co-chairman of the Defense Department's Joint Cross-Service Group for Test and Evaluation, with joint cross-service authority for all military bases and test ranges involved in test and evaluation. Beginning in late 2004, Coyle served briefly on Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger's Base Support and Retention Council.

As director, Operational Test and Evaluation, Coyle had responsibility for overseeing the test and evaluation of over 200 major defense acquisition systems. This included reporting to the secretary of defense, and to Congress, on the adequacy of the DOD testing programs, and on the results from those testing programs. Coyle was called upon regularly to testify before Congress and to brief Congressional staff on the status of major defense acquisition programs.

Coyle has 40 years experience in research, development, and testing matters. From 1959 to 1979, and again from 1981 to 1993, Coyle worked at the Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory in Livermore, California. From 1987 to 1993, he served as laboratory associate director and deputy to the laboratory director. In recognition of his 33 years service to the laboratory and to the University of California, the university named Coyle Laboratory Associate Director Emeritus.

Mohamed Elmenshawy
Director, WSI Cairo; Co-Director, International Media Division; Editor in Chief, Taqrir Washington

Areas of Expertise: Arab media; U.S.-Middle East relations

Phone: 202.797.5262 | Email: Mohamed@taqrir.org

Mohamed Elmenshawy is the director of the World Security Institute's Cairo office and editor in chief of Taqrir Washington. Before joining Taqrir Washington, Elmenshawy worked as the managing editor for an Arabic-language bimonthly publication called Global Issues. He also served as a Washington correspondent for the daily pan-Arab newspaper Asharq Alawsat where he covered the White House, the State Department, and Congress. He is a regular contributor to the Alhayat newspaper, Global Issues, and the Aljazeera website, and appears frequently on CNN International, MSNBC, and the pan-Arab TV network Orbit. Elmenshawy is the author of several articles on Middle Eastern issues in such publications as Aljazeera Net, and International Herald Tribune.

Elmenshawy is an instructor at the Middle East Institute in Washington, D.C. where he teaches classes about current issues in the Arab world and Arab media.

Elmenshawy holds a master's degree in international relations and Middle Eastern politics from the University of Akron and an MBA in international strategy from American University. He earned his bachelor's degree in political science from Cairo University in Egypt.

Aleksandr Grigoriev

Areas of Expertise: Russian media; U.S.-Russian relations

Phone: 202.797.5560 | Email: Sasha@washprofile.org

Aleksandr Grigoriev is editor in chief of Washington Profile. Prior to his arrival in 2001, Grigoriev worked as a fellow at the International Center in Washington, DC. Grigoriev received his bachelor's degree in journalism from St. Petersburg State University in Russia and earned a master's degree from the St. Petersburg State University of Economics and Finance. He also studied at Leipzig University in Germany and Kalmar University in Sweden. For nearly seven years, he worked as a political and economic analyst at the largest business newspaper in northwest Russia, Delovoy Peterburg, where he won several professional awards. He is the author of "Russian Media and Unfreedom of the Press," a chapter in the book International Communications: A Media Literacy Approach (2004).

Eric Hagt
Director, WSI China Program

Areas of Expertise: U.S.-China relations; Chinese policies related to space programs, nuclear weapons, and energy

Phone: 202.460.6740 | Email: Ehagt@wsichina.org

Eric Hagt is the director of the China Program at the World Security Institute, in Washington, D.C., where he manages projects on traditional and non-traditional security issues in China including space, energy and health. He was a visiting researcher and the Freeman Chair in China Studies at the Center for Strategic and International Studies and has studied and worked in Taiwan and Mainland China for eight years. In 2004, Hagt earned a master's degree in international policy and China studies at UC Berkeley and received his bachelor's degree in biochemistry from McMaster University in Hamilton, Canada in 1992. Hagt has authored publications on China's natural and energy resources, politics with Taiwan and North Korea, HIV/AIDS, rural development and civil society.

Theresa Hitchens Director, Center for Defense Information

Areas of Expertise: Space weaponization

Phone: 202.797.5269 | Email: Thitchens@cdi.org

Editor of Defense News from 1998 to 2000, Hitchens has had a long career in journalism, with a focus on military, defense industry and NATO affairs. Her time at Defense News included five years as the newspaper's first Brussels bureau chief, from 1989 to 1993. From 1983 to 1988, she worked at Inside Washington Publishers on the group's environmental and defense-related newsletters, covering issues from nuclear waste to electronic warfare to military space.

She has had a long interest in security policy and politics, having served internships with Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, and with the NATO Parliamentary Assembly in Brussels. Most recently, she was director of research at the British American Security Information Council, a think tank based in Washington and London.

Besides her duties as CDI director, Hitchens leads CDI's Space Security Project. The author of "Future Security In Space: Charting a Cooperative Course," she also continues to write on space and nuclear arms control issues for a number of outside publications. She serves on the editorial board of The Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists, and is a member of Women in International Security and the International Institute for Strategic Studies.

David Johnson Editor-in-Chief, Johnson's Russia List

Areas of Expertise: U.S.-Russian relations

Phone: 202.797.5277 | Email: djohnson@worldsecurityinstitute.org

David Johnson first joined WSI's Center for Defense Information at its founding in 1972. He was the chief of research at the Center and is now the editor of the World Security Institute's "Johnson's Russia List."

Johnson is co-editor of "Current Issues in U.S. Defense Policy," and has published in a number of newspapers and magazines, including The New York Times, Newsday, National Catholic Reporter, World-View, USA Today, The Christian Science Monitor, and The Washington Post. He has traveled frequently in the former Soviet Union and also visited China. Johnson has prepared many issues of CDI's publication The Defense Monitor and episodes of CDI's America's Defense Monitor television program on a wide range of military and foreign policy issues.

Prior to joining the World Security Institute, Johnson served on the staff of Rep. Michael Harrington, D-Mass., with the House Armed Services Committee. He served as a military analyst for the Friends Committee on National Legislation and graduated from Brandeis University. He has done graduate work in Chinese and Russian studies at Harvard University.

Hon. Lawrence J. Korb
Senior Advisor, Center for Defense Information

Areas of Expertise: U.S. defense policy, U.S. military forces, U.S. defense contractors

Email: Lkorb@americanprogress.org

Lawrence J. Korb is a senior fellow at the Center for American Progress and a senior advisor to the Center for Defense Information. Prior to joining the Center, he was senior fellow and director of national security studies at the Council on Foreign Relations. From July 1998 to October 2002, he was council vice president, director of studies, and holder of the Maurice Greenberg Chair. Korb has also served as director of the Center for Public Policy Education and senior fellow in the Foreign Policy Studies Program at the Brookings Institution, dean of the Graduate School of Public and International Affairs at the University of Pittsburgh, and vice president of corporate operations at the Raytheon Company.

Korb served as assistant secretary of defense (manpower, reserve affairs, installations and logistics) from 1981 through 1985. In that position, he administered about 70 percent of the defense budget. For his service in that position, he was awarded the Department of Defense's medal for distinguished public service.

Korb is chairman of the board of advisors for the National Military Family Association. He has also been chairman of the board for the Committee of National Security, a member of the board of visitors of the Lyndon Johnson School of Public Affairs at the University of Texas and of the Mershon Center at Ohio State University. He is a member of the Council on Foreign Relations, the International Institute of Strategic Studies, the National Academy of Public Administration, and the Aspen Strategy Group. He was a member of the Defense Advisory Committee for President-Elect Reagan (1980) and a member of the Defense Issues Group for President-Elect Bush (1988).

John Newhouse
Senior Fellow, Center for Defense Information

Areas of Expertise: U.S. arms control and diplomacy

From 1998 to 2001, Newhouse served as senior policy advisor on European affairs to Strobe Talbott, U.S. deputy secretary of state. From 1980 to 1998, he was a guest scholar at the Brookings Institution, and served as a staff writer for the New Yorker magazine from 1980 to 1994. Newhouse is an expert in arms control and diplomacy, having spent 1977-1979 as assistant director of the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency with responsibility for East-West matters, including Strategic Arms Limitation Talks. He is the author of a number of books, including Europe Adrift, War and Peace in the Nuclear Age, and Cold Dawn: The Story of SALT. Newhouse is conducting analysis, writing, and advising CDI staff on international affairs and arms control-related issues.

Ivan Safranchuk
Director, WSI Moscow

Areas of Expertise: U.S.-Russian relations; Russian defense and security policy; Russia's nuclear weapons arsenal

Phone: +7 (0)95 135 0419 | Email: Isafranchuk@worldsecurityinstitute.org

Dr. Ivan Safranchuk joined the organization in July 2001 to open a branch office in Russia, WSI Moscow, aimed at providing the Russian media and public with independent, unfiltered information about international relations, in particular U.S.-Russian security relations. A well-known nuclear analyst in Russia, he spent four years at the PIR Center in Moscow before joining WSI, including as the director of the Institute's "Nuclear Weapons and Their Future" project.

Safranchuk has written extensively on nuclear weapons and arms control issues in both Russian and English. Some of his publications include: "An Array of Threats to Russia" in Assessing the Threats (ed. John Newhouse), CDI, Washington, D.C., 2002; Contemporary Russian Military Journalism, Moscow, 2003; and "Tactical Nuclear Weapons in the Modern World: A Russian Perspective" in Tactical Nuclear Weapons (ed. Brian Alexandre and Alistair Millar) Brassey's Inc. 2003. He frequently contributes op-eds to Russian and international papers such as Nezavisimay Gazeta, Vremay Novostey, Nezavisimoe Voennoe Obozreniye, Moscow Times, and the International Herald Tribune.

Victoria Samson
Research Analyst, Center for Defense Information

Areas of Expertise: U.S. missile defenses; space weaponization; U.S. nuclear weapons policy

Phone: 210.455.7838 | Email: Vsamson@cdi.org

Victoria Samson joined the Center for Defense Information in November 2001. Her areas of interest include missile defense, nuclear reductions, and emerging weapons technologies. Samson, the author of numerous op-eds, analytical pieces, journal articles, and electronic updates on missile defense and space security matters, provides an objective assessment of U.S. policy.

Prior to coming to CDI, Samson was the senior policy associate at the Coalition to Reduce Nuclear Dangers, a consortium of arms control groups in the Washington, D.C., area. She previously worked as a subcontractor on war-gaming scenarios for the Missile Defense Agency's Directorate of Intelligence.

Samson has an M.A. in international relations from the Johns Hopkins School of Advanced International Studies. She also holds a B.A. in political science with a specialization in international relations from UCLA.

Stephen Sapienza
Co-Director, Azimuth Media

Areas of Expertise: Documentary production

Phone: 202.797.5268 | Email: Steve@azimuthmedia.org

Stephen Sapienza is a producer and writer of television programs for national and international distribution. He recently produced “Deadlock: Russia's Forgotten War,” for CNN Presents in collaboration with reporter Michael Gordon of The New York Times. The documentary won a 2002 CINE Golden Eagle Award. Since 1992 he has written and produced 45 documentaries broadcast on PBS covering a wide range of military and foreign policy topics. In his 12 years of experience as a video editor and videographer, he has produced award-winning documentaries on topics as diverse as child combatants in Sierra Leone, the Cuban military, and landmine survivors in Cambodia. He currently writes and produces for Azimuth Media's global affairs TV series, Foreign Exchange with Fareed Zakaria. He became co-director of Azimuth Media in 2001.

Jon Sawyer
Director, Pulitzer Center on Crisis Reporting

Areas of Expertise: U.S. media and foreign affairs reporting

Phone: 202.797.5285 | E-mail: Jsawyer@pulitzercenter.org

Jon Sawyer is director of the Pulitzer Center on Crisis Reporting, a non-profit organization that funds independent reporting with the intent of raising the standard of media coverage of global affairs. Sawyer became the Center's founding director earlier this year, after a 31-year career with the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Sawyer was the Post-Dispatch Washington bureau chief from 1993 through 2005. He had been a member of the newspaper's Washington bureau since 1980 and before that worked in St. Louis, first as an editorial writer and then as a staff reporter. His assignments have taken him to some five dozen countries. In recent years he has focused much of his reporting on the Middle East and predominantly Muslim countries.

Sawyer was selected three years in a row for the National Press Club's award for best foreign reporting. His work has been honored by the Overseas Press Club, the Inter-American Press Association and the School of Foreign Service at Georgetown University.

Sawyer received a B.A. degree from Yale University in 1974 and has held fellowships at Princeton and Harvard universities. He and his wife, children's book author Kem Knapp Sawyer, have three daughters.

Rachel Stohl
Senior Analyst, Center for Defense Information

Areas of Expertise: International arms trade; small arms and light weapons; child soldiers; failed states; landmines; arms exports

Phone: 202.797.5283 | Email: Rstohl@cdi.org

Rachel Stohl is a senior analyst at the Center for Defense Information in Washington, D.C. Her areas of expertise include the international arms trade, small arms and light weapons, landmines, failed states, children and armed conflict, including child soldiers, and the United Nations. Prior to joining CDI, Stohl was a Herbert Scoville Peace Fellow at the British American Security Information Council (BASIC) in Washington, D.C. Stohl previously worked at the U.N. Center for Disarmament Affairs in New York and at the Program for Arms Control, Disarmament, and Conversion in Monterey, Calif.

Stohl is a prolific writer. Her work has appeared in numerous publications including the Los Angeles Times, the International Herald Tribune, Defense News, the Christian Science Monitor, the Brown Journal of World Affairs, the Journal of Conflict, Security and Development, the African Security Review, the SAIS Review: A Journal of International Affairs, and the Small Arms Survey. She is quoted regularly in international newspapers and has been a frequent guest on radio, with appearances on National Public Radio, Voice of America, and Radio Free Europe/Radio Liberty. She has also written and helped produce documentaries for CDI on small arms, landmines, failed states, and child soldiers.

Stohl is co-editor of, and contributor to, "Challenging Conventional Wisdom: Debunking the Myths and Exposing the Risks of Arms Export Reform," a project of CDI and the Federation of American Scientists. Released in June 2003, the book describes special governmental support for the weapons industry; probes the justifications for major changes to the export system; examines the potential risks associated with these changes; and provides suggestions to strengthen the export control system. Stohl is also a co-author of book, "The Small Arms Trade: A Beginner's Guide," released in early 2007.

Stohl has spoken at and moderated several events on Capitol Hill for members of Congress and their staffs. She works frequently with the U.S. military on issues of child soldiers and has presented seminars at the U.S. Naval Academy, Quantico Marine Base, and Coronado Naval Air Station.

Stohl is currently an adjunct professor at Georgetown University. She has lectured at various universities, including the University of California Santa Barbara, University of California Los Angeles, George Washington University, Hampshire College, Smith College, the University of Michigan, and Yale University. Stohl currently teaches "Introduction to Justice and Peace" at Georgetown University and previously taught "Understanding U.S. Foreign Policy Making" at The Washington Center for Internships and Academic Seminars. Stohl also speaks regularly at non-governmental and international conferences, such as the U.N. Conference on Small Arms, the International Conference on War Affected Children, the U.N. Special Session on Children, and the International Physicians to Prevent Nuclear War/Physicians for Social Responsibility World Congress.

Stohl is chairperson of the Small Arms Working Group, steering committee member of the U.S. Campaign to Stop the Use of Child Soldiers, an outgoing board member of the International Action Network on Small Arms, a member of Women in International Security, serves on the experts board of the Center for Unconventional Security Affairs at the University of California Irvine, and is advisor to the Watchlist on Children and Armed Conflict. Stohl holds a master's degree in international policy studies from the Monterey Institute of International Studies and a bachelor's degree in political science and German from the University of Wisconsin-Madison.

Areas of Expertise: TV and documentary production

Phone: 202.797.5272 | Email: Mark@azimuthmedia.org

Mark Sugg is the series producer for Foreign Exchange, responsible for all operational and day-to-day editorial matters related to the television series. Sugg has been a non-profit television producer in Washington, D.C., for 20 years. He was the director of television operations for America's Defense Monitor, a weekly documentary series devoted to international security issues. Previously he was the director of Ideal Communications, Inc., an independent non-profit production company serving the educational video market and numerous broadcast outlets. Sugg has a B.A. in philosophy from St. John's College in Annapolis, Md.

Winslow T. Wheeler
Director, Straus Military Reform Project, Center for Defense Information

Areas of Expertise: U.S. defense budgets; U.S. forces and military operations; Congress and national security

Phone: 202.797.5271 | Email: Wheeler@cdi.org

Winslow T. Wheeler worked on national security issues for 31 years for members of the U.S. Senate and for the U.S. General Accounting Office (GAO). In the Senate, Wheeler worked for Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., Nancy L. Kassebaum, R-Kan., David Pryor, D-Ark., and Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M. He was the first, and according to Senate records the last, Senate staffer to work simultaneously on the personal staffs of a Republican and a Democrat (Sens. Pryor and Kassebaum).

In 2002, Wheeler authored an essay, under the pseudonym "Spartacus," about Congress' reaction to the Sept. 11, 2001, terrorists attacks ("Mr. Smith Is Dead: No One Stands in the Way as Congress Lards Post-September 11 Defense Bills with Pork"). When Senators complained about Wheeler's criticisms, he was invited to resign from his position with the Republican staff of the Senate Budget Committee. He is now a senior fellow and director of the Straus Military Reform Project at the Center for Defense Information.

Wheeler is the author of "The Wastrels of Defense: How Congress Sabotages U.S. Security" from the U.S. Naval Institute Press. The book has been the subject of commentary and interviews on 60 Minutes, C-SPAN's Book Notes, and various newspapers and radio stations.

He has also authored a 2002 essay on Congress' authorization of war against Iraq, "The Week of Shame: Congress Wilts as the President Demands an Unclogged Road to War," and he wrote various commentaries on Congress and national security, which have appeared in The Washington Post, Proceedings of the Naval Institute, Government Executive, Defense Week, Barron's, Army Times, CounterPunch, and elsewhere.

As a Senate staffer, Wheeler worked extensively on hundreds of bills and amendments that are now U.S. law. These included the War Powers Act, multiple proposals to reform Pentagon procurement, and to require more realistic weapons tests and more accurate reports about them to the secretary of defense and Congress.

While at the GAO, Wheeler directed comprehensive studies on the U.S. strategic-nuclear triad and the air campaign of Operation Desert Storm. Both studies found compelling evidence that prevailing conventional wisdom about the performance of both U.S. and foreign weapons systems, such as Soviet strategic nuclear delivery systems and U.S. “high tech” tactical weapons, was highly inflated and unsupported by the evidence available in the Department of Defense.

Gen. Charles Wilhelm
Distinguished Military Fellow, Center for Defense Information

Areas of Expertise: U.S.-Latin America relations; U.S. military strategy

Phone: 202.332.0600

Gen. Charles Wilhelm, former commander in chief of U.S. Southern Command, is advising CDI on a wide range of issues, from U.S. military strategy to policy on Latin America.

Wilhelm, who retired in September 2000, has had a long and illustrious military career, including serving as head of U.S. Southern Command from 1997 to 2000. Prior to that, he served as commander of U.S. Marine Corps Forces, Atlantic; Commanding General, Fleet Marine Force, Atlantic; Commander, U.S. Marine Forces, South; Commanding General, 11 Marine Force; Commanding General, Marine Striking Force Atlantic, Camp Lejeune, N.C.

Wilhelm has held a variety of command positions, including service during two tours in Vietnam. He commanded Marine Forces Somalia from December 1992 to March 1993, as part of the U.S.-led coalition in Operation Restore Hope.
